Penny Coplestone was an upper elementary teacher for 35 years. Her teaching experience includes bilingual/ELL classes, typical and inclusion classrooms, and Gifted and Talented classrooms, as well as serving as a Consultant Teacher, delivering methods and materials to classroom teachers to facilitate higher-level, critical and creative thinking.

Dr. Kathleen Larche is presently an assistant professor and program supervisor at Framingham State University. Her teaching experience includes the roles and responsibilities of a speech/language pathologist including the assessment, diagnosis, selection and dispensing of augmentative and alternative communication devices and direct intervention of various communication disorders for Westwood, Holliston and Westborough public schools.

As consultants for Teachers21, they have both led workshops addressing Effective Teaching Strategies, Differentiation in the Classroom, Effective Modifications and Adaptations in the Classroom and Classroom Management.
